S-10

During WW2, S-10 was commanded by Ppor. J. Schreiber and Por. Roman Dulla. 'Jan' Schreiber emigrated to Canada after the war having studied architecture at the University of Glasgow in Scotland, settled in Montreal and lectured architecture at the McGill University. He died on the 21st February 2002 and is buried at St. Sauver des-Monts, Quebec.

I am indebted to Marlowe Sprega-Morris, from Canada, who sent me some photos of S-10, as his father, Kasimiertz Sprega, a crewman on board S-10, took photos when serving on the boat. The last Commanding Officer of S-10, Roman Dulla still lives in West Sussex (2009) and helped in the making of the BBC film about S-7.

Kapitan Marynarki Roman Dulla, Polish Navy, last CO of S-10.

During WW2, the British Military Powerboat team was responsible for the development and use of a variety of small, fast, and maneuverable boats. These boats were used for a wide range of tasks, including reconnaissance, transport, and combat. The team was composed of both British and Polish personnel, and they worked closely together to develop and use these boats effectively. The boats were designed to be small and fast, with a shallow draft, which allowed them to operate in a variety of water conditions. They were also equipped with a variety of weapons, including torpedoes and machine guns. The team's work was crucial in the success of many British military operations during WW2.
