DYREKTOREM gabinetu prezydenta republiki francuskiej, p. Vincent Auriol jest wywodzący się w prostej linii z rodziny Tadeusza Kościuszki p. Jacques Kościuszko. Pan Jacques Kościuszko jest magistrem literatury i wychowankiem „Ecole Normale Superieure". Jest on członkiem partii socjalistycznej. O swym wielkim przodku polskim wyraża się z podziwem i dumny jest ze swego pokrewieństwa. Potomek emigrantów polskich urodzony i wychowany we Francji p. Kościuszko mówi zaledwie parę słów po polsku. Zachował jednak dla kraju swych przodków głęboki sentyment, z którym bynajmniej się nie kryje.

RÉPUBLIQUE

LE DIRECTEUR
DU CABINET

Paris, le 6 Mars 1950,

Monsieur le Rédacteur en Chef,

Je vous remercie de votre lettre à laquelle je n'ai pas eu le loisir, dans les préparatifs de notre voyage, de répondre plus tôt.

De toute manière, malgré le haut intérêt que présente votre Annuaire, vous comprendrez que les fonctions officielles que j'ai l'honneur d'exercer m'oblige à une très grande réserve vis-à-vis des problèmes Polonais de l'heure actuelle. J'ajoute que le dernier membre de ma famille qui parlât Polonais était mon arrière Grand-Père venu en France au milieu du XIXème siècle.

Je vous prie de bien vouloir agréer, Monsieur le Rédacteur en Chef, l'assurance de ma considération très distinguée.

Biography

Born in Paris to a respected Polish family, Kosciusco earned a degree in ethics and sociology from the École Normale Supérieure and taught high school in Grenoble from 1941 to 1943. He fought in World War II and was captured by German forces. He escaped, joined the French resistance, and participated in the defense of the city hall of Paris in 1944, for which he was decorated after the war.[1]

Kosciusko served as bureaucrat in various French ministries before becoming a diplomat. He became Chief of Staff to the Secretary General of the Prefecture of Police and Assistant at the Faculty of Letters in Paris from 1944 to 1946. He was briefly a professor at Columbia University in 1946. He was made deputy director of the cabinet of Léon Blum in 1946, and then Chief of Staff (Civil) for President Vincent Auriol in 1947, a position he held until 1954. He also served Félix Houphouët-Boigny of Côte d'Ivoire from 1956 to 1957.

Kosciusko's international standing rose when he was France's delegate to the United Nations General Assembly from 1957 to 1962. He was ambassador to Congo (Léopoldville)/(Kinshasa) from 1963 to 1968, and was the French ambassador to NATO from 1969 to 1970.[1] He was ambassador to the United Nations from 1970 to 1972, and French ambassador to the United States from 1972 to 1977.[2] He retired from the diplomatic corps in 1978.

Afterwards Kosciusko became involved in local French politics. He was the national secretary for foreign relations of the Rally for the Republic party from 1983 to 1988, and was mayor of Saint-Nom-la-Bretèche from 1977 until his death there in 1994.[1] He was also a director of Christian Dior between 1981 and 1993 and chairman of the supervisory board of Louis Vuitton between 1989 and 1992.

His granddaughter Nathalie Kosciusko-Morizet is a former Minister of Ecology, Sustainable Development, Transport and Housing and has been involved politically for many years at different levels. His grandson Pierre Kosciusko-Morizet is a co-founder of Priceminister.
